THE WOMEN'S ANTI-DRINK CRUSADE.

It the True Way to Repress the Vice of Drunkenness? NEW YORK, Feb. 5, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—
The HERALD of Thursday hits the point precisely in the following apt comment on recent operations to repress the driuk traffic East and West:—"The probability, based on experience, is that in a few weeks the spirits of the Ohio Amazons and of the Rub police will be exhausted; and then those other spirits, now under the ban, will rule again with more absolute sway than before the breaking out of the rebellion, which has for a while intered with their supremacy." In that one sentence the conviction of all thoughtful friends of temperance is expressed. These proceedings are spasmodic, somewhat sensational and sure to cause a beaction in favor of the anti-temperance interest. Ili-advised attempts at propagandism often run into burlesque, injuring the cause it aims honestly to serve. Brizades of women enter the "saloon" at night and set up a singing class amid the customers and hurt psalm geross "the bar;" the salesman retaliates by put-ting out the lights, the "boys" are in ecstasy and the women take to screaming and to flight. This not reform. Our revivalists prayed and sung the women take to screaming and to dight. This is not reform. Our revivalists prayed and sung "the wickedest man in New York" out of his dog pit in Water street, but these tactics will not effect a widespread and subtle popular vice. The scoff and frohe of it all, among the people, will rather make a laughing stock for those hostile to temperance and a matter of grief to its devoted advoca. In our Catholic parishes we see ladies taking the pledge and forming total abstinence societies throughout the country. The same is the case among other classes. Thousands of ladies will be deterred from taking this really practical step if they are subjected to the sneers and merriment which "the ladies' brigades" are provoking. "You have joined the temperance cause; when will you start on your singing crusade among the saloons?" Such weapons will be readily put in use to discourage the timid, and many who are now disposed to share in the good work will naturally hestate. We know that Cervanies laughed mock chivairy out of Europe by trotting out Don Quixote on his Rosinante. The preachers who are sending out these bands of maids and matrous on their adventurous enterprise, may turn the tide of sentiment against the temperance movement. Heaven knows the country is suffering sorely, and every man and woman is bound to fielp in removing the great public mistortune, crime and scandal of the age, intemperance. In contemplating the peculiar programme of these earnest and honest men and women, however, one is reminded of the tevered patient, who, in the agonies of his disease, seeks a cold drink, which will not relieve, but aggravate his maindy. In all sympathy and kindness one must see that these operations will prove a grave detriment to the temperance cause.

Your Cincinnait correspondent very truly remarks that "as long as the demand exists the supply will be forthcoming." This is a most important fact, which, had it been more generally observed and acted on it this country with the persistence, energy and force expended in ot movement quietly enrolling our millions of citisens. Do not think this the true method of wariare on the saloons. If our Protestant preachers were to devote to the fostering of personal abstinence among their flocks the zeal expended in sidewalk prayer meetings against the groggeries would not the fruit be more abundant and better?

As a great public educator and leader of thought the Herald is earmestly appealed to 10 foster this religious abstinence movement now spreading all around us and offering the best remedy against our national grievance and peril—the sourge of intemperance. Any experiment that tends to divert public thought into wrong channels on this question injures the common cause. To buse confidence on unsafe experiments is to unite disappointments and weariness of heart, enfeebling the true temperance movement, to which the country must ultimately look for complete relief.

There is public sentiment strong enough now in America to sweep intemperance from the land if only side issues and false issues are kept away and the true means invoked. To assist in this desirable end I beg to submit to the great constituency of the Herald these reflections, prompted by your efformal property of the server of the Herald these reflections, prompted by your
